The SUNY ULSTER NURSING & LGBTQA Clubs & SGO are proud to present:

Cultural Competency in Nursing: An introduction to providing respectful, quality care to transgender patients.

Many health care agencies and providers consider themselves “LGBT-friendly.” Yet how prepared are they to serve trans* people well? Providers with the best of intentions may not have the skills and knowledge they need to provide skilled support.

This interactive workshop is for health care professionals and students who want to become more comfortable and competent working with patients whose are trans* and/or gender-nonconforming. Participants will learn about trans* health care needs and disparities, respectful terminology, and relevant resources.

Davey Shlasko

Davey is an educator, author and consultant whose passion is facilitating group learning about and in the context of social justice movements. Davey has published writing on a variety of social justice topics including curricula for teaching about transgender issues, and was recently heard on Radio Q discussing gender-neutral pronouns. Davey has been writing and teaching about trans communities since 2000.
